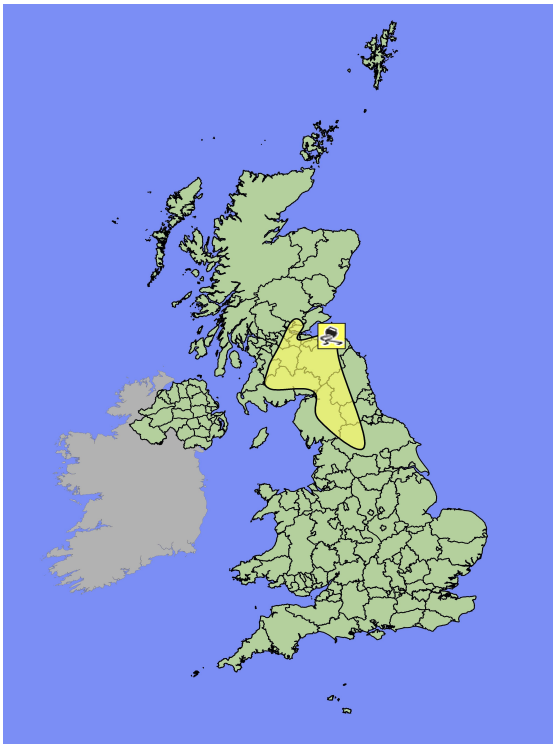
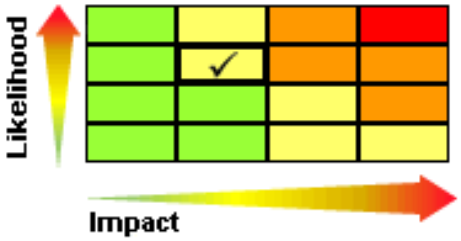
National Severe Weather Warning Service





Chief Forecasters Assessment
A combination of showers, some wintry, and clear spells, poses the risk of ice to start Sunday, chiefly on untreated surfaces.

The Met Office have issued a Yellow Warning of Ice

Valid from 02:00 on Sun, 30th Dec 2012 until 11:00 on Sun, 30th Dec 2012

There will be an increasing risk of icy stretches from the early hours of Sunday morning, especially on higher routes. Showers will cause wash-off of salt, so even previously treated roads are at risk. As the air turns colder the showers will also become wintry at times with the risk of a few cm of snow mainly on ground above 300 m.

The public should be aware of possible hazards due to the ice.
